Play is a necessary part of your dog's life and the right kind can be fun for both of you. Many dogs become troublesome because they don't have an outlet for letting off steam. The dog then devises his own recreation, such as barking, fence running, digging or chewing up draperies, and the owners are usually to blame.

The form of play you give your dog should depend on his age, stage of development and health. Younger dogs have an abundance of energy which requires direction. They learn a lot from games which also serve to give them exercise.

For example, "hide and seek" is an excellent way to encourage a puppy to use his sense of smell, and he has fun at the same time. Throwing a ball for a dog to retrieve will develop his muscles, give him exercise and at the same time, recreation. Don't, however, choose a game that will tax your dog too much. Older dogs as well as puppies should not be allowed to play beyond their capacity.

A PUPPY uses a lot of energy just in growing, as well as playing. Therefore, he needs plenty of rest. After playing a puppy should have rest periods two or three times a day. He can be penned in wherever his bed is, and though he may complain at first, shortly he will get the idea and sleep.

During the age when the puppy is teething (four or five months), he will undoubtedly begin chewing on everything in sight. You can greatly help him by providing teething bones for him to chew on. This product is available at any pet shop. This will aid in loosening the teeth, which might be giving him some pain. Make doubly certain this chewy delight is within easy reach of your pup or you might find him chewing up your best table leg or that brand new pair of shoes you just purchased. Puppies can easily become bored so by all means keep him amused.

A DOG which is not old enough to have the run of the house can be kept in a play-pen. This enables the dog to get some exercise while confined to an area in which he is safe.

Select a form of play that is fun for both you and your dog. Getting out with him will give you some exercise, too. Recreation for the dog should always be safe and within the boundaries of your own home and property unless the dog is accompanied. People who allow their dogs to roam free are inviting trouble. The dog may get more exercise that way, but he is also exposed to many dangers. A dog under control is a much happier and healthier dog!

TALES FROM DOGDOM—The Kennel Club of Riverside holds forth Sunday with their annual all-breed show and obedience trial to be held at the Fairgrounds in Hemet. Clark C. Thompson will judge the Best Dog in Show at this one-day unbenched canine attraction. Recommended for your doggie library—Col. Bailey C. Hanes' "The Complete Bulldog." Published by Howell Book House, 845 Third Ave., New York City, N.Y., this book is a classic for fanciers of the "Gorgeous Sourmug" and for all dog lovers in general. Traces the complete history of the Bulldog. In words and pictures, this library gem runs to 320 pages and is priced at only $5.95. You can order a copy direct from the publishers.

An infantry scout dog has been credited with alerting an American company to the presence of 300 North Vietnamese who were lying in ambush positions, according to a new item reaching my desk. "Tiger," a German Shepherd, led the platoon and was a full 75 yards from the enemy position when he caught the scent of trouble ahead. Before the engagement was over, Tiger had been instantly killed by the first of seven bullets found in his precious body. So sad!

BREED OF THE WEEK—Papillon. . . The Papillon breed of dog dates back to the 16th Century and early historical records indicate the Court of Louis XIV of France held these elegant little dogs in high esteem. Many of the great paintings of this area depict Papillons or dwarf spaniels, as they were called at that time, in company with their fashionable mistresses. The name Papillon means "butterfly" and this is most appropriate for their ears erect, far spread and silken gringed, resembling an oversized butterfly.

The breed's dainty, lively grace plus an excellent disposition make him an ideal house companion and a most desirable pet.

County to Continue New Health Inspection Work

Continuation of a hospital and institution inspection program by the Los Angeles County Health Department has been ordered, Supervisor Burton W. Chace said today. The Board of Supervisors Tuesday adopted an ordinance renewing county responsibility to conduct these inspections.

The Papillon tips the scales at about 11 pounds and in height 11 inches. The Papillon is classified in the toy group of dogs.

Listen to Francis X. Lohmann's radio version of Kanine Korner, Monday through Friday at 4:30 p.m. over Station KTYM, 1460 kcs.

The county first accepted the inspection responsibility July 1, 1966. Annual renewal of the inspection program is required by law.

"Continuation of this important public health function by our county staff is vital," Chace said. "In this way, we assume local control and make certain the public health of Los Angeles County residents is safeguarded," he said.
